

Australia Mortgage Application Checklist

Applying for your mortgage is easier when you're prepared.

Before you meet with your Mortgage Broker, make sure you have the following documents ready.

Identification

The Australian government laid out a personal identification system called 100-point check, where they've assigned a specific number of points to all the major personal identification documents to prevent cases of fraud. The idea, as far as mortgage approval goes, is that consumers should be able to provide at least 100 points worth of identification to fend off any doubts of mistaken/stolen identity or illegally borrowing money.

You can find the full list of point values at the link above, but here are some examples of the points that some forms of identification will give you:

- Passport :70 points
- Birth certificate: 70 points
- Citizenship certificate: 70 points
- Centrelink pension card: 40 points
- Driver's License or permit: 25 points

Proof of Employment and Income.

A regular source of income is a must if you're looking for a pre-approved mortgage. You have to show that you are steadily, consistently employed: typically by remaining an employee of the same company for a certain amount of time, and that you are paid regularly.

For those who are self-employed, things might be a little different, as you'll have to prove you're financially stable by showing documentations of your business and/or freelance activities despite not being an ordinary employee. Some ways you can show this include:

- Pay slips/Invoices (for at least three months)
- Tax returns (no longer than 18 months)

Proof of Savings

Banks and other lenders are wary of mortgage seekers, and need to be assured that anyone they're dealing with has good financial sense. More often than not, they will ask for your bank statements over the past three months, to review how your money flows in and out of your savings account.

Proof of Current Debts

Be honest when you declare your additional debts. Lenders take pre-existing debt into consideration when deciding if you are an ideal candidate for a home loan. As such, billing statements from credit cards and other loans should be submitted so that the lender will have a bird's eye view of your expenses.

Proof of Assets

Make sure to give your bank a heads-up if you own other assets. If you happen to have real estate properties, you can provide a council rate as evidence of your ownership.
